We'd not been up to Sheigra in the month of March since 2002, as most DXpeditions have traditionally taken place in October or November. But this tiny crofting village in the far north-western corner of the Scottish mainland is always a draw for DXing or just to enjoy the wild open landscape. So, although very late in the MW DX season, we decided to chance a two-week DXpedition in March, ending on the day of a solar eclipse. Tony Rogers was unable to make this DXpedition, so just the two of us made the long drive north, for what records say is the 55th DXpedition to Sheigra. We certainly missed the extra pair of hands putting up and taking down the long Beverage aerials! Our DX base for both weeks was Murdo's cottage, a traditional crofters style house which we had used for the first time on the last Sheigra DXpedition in October 2013, and is more favourably sited for erecting aerials targeting the Americas. It was pretty wet and windy by the time we arrived in Sheigra on Saturday afternoon, so we just put up the initial lengths of our four Beverages to the croft fence, before retreating to the cottage to warm up and dry out. All four aerials were completed the next day (Sunday), but the Met Office warned of 80mph winds on the Monday night. Our Beverage wires, which are supported on garden canes, are usually flexible enough to survive the high winds which are common on the Sutherland coast. But after the gale arrived on Monday evening, a test at the cottage showed the North American aerial had already broken somewhere, and it was too dangerously windy to venture out into the wild dark night to search for and fix the break. We were relieved the following day to find the cottage had suffered no damage, despite the tremendous gusts and noises from the cottage roof during the night. And, just as important for DXing, the power was still on! However, walking up the 300° North American aerial revealed that the wire had been completely wrecked in the final exposed stretch which runs from a hilltop to the cliff tops, broken in at least 8 places. Rather than unravel the mess of wire we found, it was replaced with a new length, in the hope that the previous night's storm would not be repeated.

left: morning after the storm - Alan with wrecked North American Beverage wire.

Driving later to Kinlochbervie, we saw enroute that the telephone box at nearby Blairmore had been blown over and smashed, such had been the strength of the wind the previous night!

There were some more windy days in that first week, but none as bad as that Monday night, and from Friday 13th onwards, we were very lucky with the weather, with lots of sunshine and blue skies. Nice enough weather to sit outside the cottage, or stroll down to the deserted sandy beaches at Sheigra and nearby Polin and Oldshoremore. Though plans for longer walks had to be shelved as Alan had suffered a torn ligament putting up the aerials on the first weekend.

We've also reported damage to our aerials from deer on past DXpeditions, but despite seeing lots of deer when driving up along the single track road from Lairg to Laxford Bridge, in Sheigra itself we only saw one fairly tame lone doe (photo right). Maybe rutting deer in the autumn are the ones more liable to damage our aerials? Likewise, the sheep, some soon to be lambing, paid little attention to our aerials, though liked to follow us along the aerials in the hope we had some feed for them!

Having not anticipated much on medium wave so late in the season (and in a season which has not been particularly good for MW DXing) we were pleasantly surprised to find quite lively reception from Atlantic Canada (fade-in around 2130 UTC) and East Coast USA, especially New England (around 2300), including some low powered stations and a number of Sheigra "firsts". Highlight on 13th March was hearing Virginia Dept of Transport Highway Advisory Radio on 1680 kHz – a low power 10 Watt traffic information station! Morning reception was mainly from Central and Latin America, with fade-out around 0930 - stations from Cuba and Florida often being the last to fade out. Nothing much was heard from further west in North America, but that would not be expected at this time of year and at this point in the solar cycle. Afternoon fade-in was typically around 1600 UTC when we had about an hour of interesting reception from Asia and the Middle East before these weak signals were swamped out by stronger European stations. Shortwave was generally quite poor, although a few stations from Peru and Bolivia were logged on 8th and 9th. Conditions changed dramatically on 17th when we were also fortunate to see an aurora – albeit partly obscured by cloud – after which the MW band was only open to signals from much further south – mainly Brazil and Argentina; the SW band was also disturbed with only a few African signals being enhanced. We were pleased that the auroral conditions also gave us enhanced reception of a couple of Nigerian MW stations (594 Kaduna and 917 Gotel) from off the back of our 340 degree unterminated wire.

The final morning before aerials were dismantled (20th) saw disappointing poor reception of just a few LA stations with an early fade out. This was the day of the much anticipated partial solar eclipse and in the far north west tip of Scotland at Sheigra, more than 97% of the sun's disc was obscured. At the time of maximum obscurity (09.39 UTC), despite a lot of fast moving cloud, we were still able to view the sun's disc in the blue patches and through thinner cloud edges using the solar glasses saved from the August 1999 eclipse. But what effect did the eclipse have on radio reception? We had noticed stronger reception of Spanish stations on medium wave as the eclipse tracked towards us that morning. But we noticed no reappearance of reception from the Americas on medium wave, which had been poor that morning anyhow. On shortwave Canada 6070 kHz and Ecuador 6050 kHz seemed stronger for a while – was this due to the eclipse? On 531 kHz, the Faroe Islands station is always a huge signal in Sheigra, so could be no indicator of the eclipse's effect on reception. But we did monitor 1485 kHz for a period around 10.10 UTC on our northerly aerial in the hope that the 100% eclipse on the islands of Svalbard would enable signals from the 1 kW NRK station at Longyearbyen to rise above the European mix on this channel – but sadly not a trace was heard, although the NRK longwave transmitter on 153 kHz peaked strongly during the eclipse.

Overall, we were not disappointed with a good varied mix of logs and reception conditions during the fortnight, given the time of year and position in the solar cycle. The space to put up long aerials and the lower interference levels at Sheigra means we can always rely on hearing lots more than at home! Our medium wave logs are below, followed by a selection of our shortwave logs.

Logs believed to be “Sheigra Firsts” are highlighted in bold (* indicates UK first).
